Hockey for kids

YOUTH HOCKEY

checks into the valley

Ice hockey in Southern California just seems too incompatible to mentally picture.

Although the Los Angeles Kings have been a fixture at the Forum since 1967, they haven't had to replace any of the arena's 16,000 seats from damage suffered by too much use.

In 1974, the National Hockey League club had its highest attendance average of 12,620 fans a game. Normally, the club draws somewhere between 8,000 and 9,000 fans for each home game.

Their counterparts in New York, the Islanders, defending Stanley Cup champions, sellout virtually every home date.

Maybe it's the palm trees on Prairie Avenue.

Still, hockey has continued to be played and supported by a cadre of Southern Californians.

Locally, one former professional hockey player has definite plans to make that number increase.

Tom Lesjure, manager of the Ontario Ice Skating Center on Holt Blvd., is heading a new program at the center to teach area kids hockey from the skates up. Literally.

"It's hardest to get the coaches to go back to the basement (instructing the basic fundamentals)," Lesjure said at the beginning of the program's first session earlier this month. "Without skating, a kid's not going to be worth anything."

Lesjure should know.

A Canadian citizen, he played eight years of professional hockey in Canada, and competed for 14 seasons as an amateur.

"I usually played center," he said.

His 16-week program is designed to teach youths from ages 5-15 all the hockey fundamentals, including skating, shooting, puck control, and passing.

The sessions are an hour long, and cost five dollars each, with each pupil allowed an additional free, public session once a week.

The cost doesn't include equipment, but Lesjure said parents should be able to outfit their kids for anywhere from 60 to 90 dollars.

Hockey is definitely not a game for those with weak hearts or bodies. Remember the old joke, "Last night I went to a fight, and a hockey game broke out."

Yet, Lesjure doesn't think kindergarten and high speed pucks are incongruous.

"Five is an ideal age to start teaching the kids," Lesjure said. "At this point, they don't have any bad habits. I got my first skates when I was three."

He also said the kids would be fully equipped, including mouthpieces like the ones used by youth football players, and that body contact would not be allowed in the program.

Lesjure said the idea to start a local program came after kids at the center expressed an interest. Another factor was his dissatisfaction with the way other youth hockey programs are run.

"Most programs, have tryouts and if a kid isn't good enough, he's cut," Lesjure said. "Here, everyone who wants it will get instruction throughout the program."

Currently, the program is staffed by about 15 unpaid volunteers, including 12 coaches with backgrounds in either professional or amateur hockey.

John Garner, a former football player at Duquesne and coach of the USC mens' club team, and has come out to help Lesjure.

"It's great," he said. "I'm always excited when I get to coach kids."

During the program, the coaches will work with the kids individually, while Lesjure keeps detailed records on each skater's progress. Each week, every kid in the program will be given a different skill to master.

"The ultimate goal is to develop the kids, so then we can form a club (team)," Lesjure said.

Several Southland communities promote youth hockey teams including West Covina and Norwalk. According to Lesjure, Norwalk boasts the largest program in the area, with around 225 participants on two different skill levels.

Lesjure added that he has commitments from some of the Kings to come out and give clinics, and there may be an opportunity for the local kids to play on the Forum ice.

"I'm trying to arrange a deal where we can bring them over (to the Forum) and have them scrimmage after a Kings game," Lesjure said.

The initial session was opened by kids in the 5-7 age group, and while most of them weren't too proficient on skates, their enthusiasm for the game was obvious.

Keith Johnson, 5, from Chino, comes from a skating family. His twin sister skates, and his grandfather plays semi-pro hockey in San Diego.

Keith said he liked the first session, but he showed the media-relations skills of Wayne Gretzky when he was asked if would eventually get to be as good as his grandfather.

"Not quite," he said with a smile as he skated back out for more practice.

NEIGHBORS

Ministers respond when the sirens call

By Ian Fallis

The sirens of the Upland Police Department are not exactly the Bells of St. Mary's, but they still draw the service of some local "men of the cloth."

Five Upland ministers serve as volunteer chaplains for the Upland Police Department. "I felt a need to get my ministry out beyond the four walls of the church," said Steve Harris, pastor of the Community Foursquare Church.

"It's an extension of my ministry, a means of helping people in crisis and emergency situations," said Don Peterman, pastor of the First Church of the Nazarene.

Harris and Peterman were among the seven ministers who reacted positively when Officer Marty Lesser approached them with the idea of a chaplain program four years ago.

Since then, five ministers have left the program and been replaced by three others. They are James Knabb of Life Bible Fellowship; Ken Peterson, pastor of the First Mennonite Church; and Jim Weaver, a minister with Campus Life who lives in Upland.

Lesser has since retired on a disability, and Capt. Gary Hart oversees the program for the police department.

"The main purpose of the program is to provide an extra service to the community," Hart said, including family counseling and helping officers notify relatives about a death, as well as "many situations officers come upon in which families feel more comfortable dealing with a chaplain."

"They're another resource for our officers to draw on," he said. The police department asks that the chaplains ride with the officers a few hours a week, but many do not have the time to ride that often.

When they are not riding, officers will call them or they might hear calls they could respond to over police scanners the Kiwanis Club has provided.

Officers will also refer people to them for counseling or assistance.

The chaplains have been through a chaplain training program at Rio Hondo College and received some training at the police department.

Because all the chaplains ride along with the officers, "we were taught that we need to protect our own lives and the lives of the officers," Knabb said.

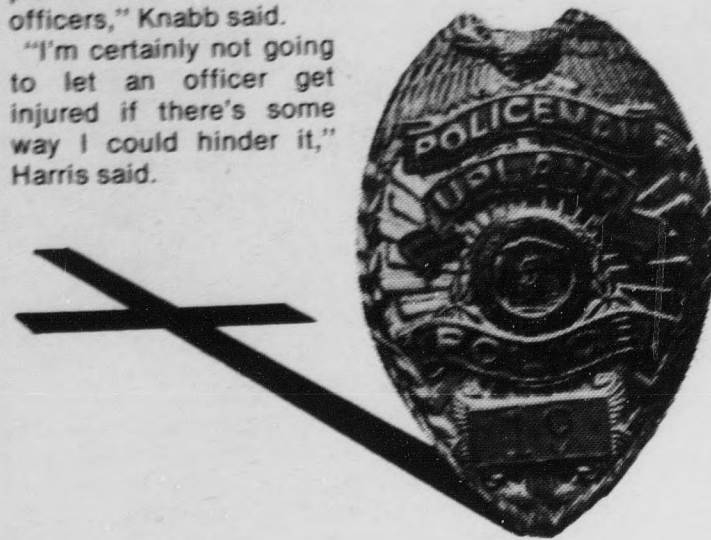

He once had to do just that.

"We had pulled over an individual for driving while under the influence ... and he kicked the officer in the groin," then ran, Knabb said.

At the same time, a second man in the car they had pulled over "came after me. My first instinct was to jump on the guy and hold him down. The officer was able to get the other guy."

Apprehending criminals isn't part of the chaplains' job, and "in no way do I want to hurt someone ... but we need to protect the lives of the officers," Knabb said.

"I'm certainly not going to let an officer get injured if there's some way I could hinder it," Harris said.

Harris once stopped a man from hurting himself. While he was riding with an officer, a man was threatening to kill himself by going up in an airplane and crashing it into a building.

He wouldn't let the officers in, but apparently calmed down and stopped threatening suicide. "The officer told me, 'If we have to go back, we may have to manhandle him. You can get involved to whatever degree you want,'" Harris said.

"A couple of hours later, he was

We've found they've been valuable to the department as a whole. The chaplains are viewed as part of the department.

Capt. Gary Hart, Upland Police Department

threatening to burn down the condo. I said 'You drive, I'll pray.'"

When they arrived, the man turned out all the lights and would not let the officers in. "They asked, 'Will you let the chaplain in?' and he said, 'yes.'"

With the officers watching from the doorway, Harris talked to him for about 20 minutes until he agreed to see to his own minister and went to bed.

"We didn't hear anything more from him ...

Being a minister breaks down some walls."

Such dangers are actually rather uncommon, but death notifications are frequent.

"I've been called out on several death notifications," Harris said. In one instance, a woman whose husband passed away asked him to perform the funeral service because they had no church.

"She's been attending ever since. Now there's a group of people (the church members) who are concerned about her," he said.

He added that he didn't use the program to build church membership, but did want to help people by leading them to a personal relationship with Christ.

Knabb provided comfort in another traumatic situation. He had been riding with a sergeant just before an early-morning attack that killed three members of an Upland family.

He was on his way home when he heard the radio broadcast of the shooting on a police scanner. He went back to the station and to the shooting with the sergeant.

"I walked into one of the most horrifying scenes in my life. It's something I'll never forget for the rest of my life."

Still, God had a reason for him being there. "I felt I was used (by God) in that situation. Other family members were left there."

"Even though I was a Christian and they were Muslim, (the differences were) bridged by compassion," Knabb said.

The "excitement" has eluded Peterson for the most part.

"Mine's been more ... referring somebody to me for counseling. There have been a number of occasions with youths or adults who have had problems and I've been able to help," Peterson said.

"Often a pastor can just be a free help to an individual."

"We've found they've been valuable to the department as a whole," Hart said. "The chaplains are viewed as part of the department."

"I wish I could get more just like 'em," he said, but ministers aren't flocking to the program.

"It involves quite a commitment," Peterman said. "I assume that probably accounts for a lot of it."

The program works because the ministers are "law and order oriented" and because the officers have accepted them, Hart said.

"We're not to be gun-toting clergymen," Harris said. "Our main objective is not to go out and uphold the law. My main objective is to be out there assisting people in the community, to make it a better place to live."

"Our role is to go along really in the capacity of peace officers," Peterman said. □

Collection for Spanish speakers

By Pat Castaneda
Upland Public Library

Spanish-speaking readers may not be aware that we have a collection of more than 500 volumes in Spanish.

The collection consists primarily of fiction and non-fiction, which may be checked out, but there are a number of non-circulating reference books as well, including a fine encyclopedia "Monitor" that contains beautiful illustrations.

Currently there are more non-fiction titles than fiction. Subjects include Latin American history such as "El Petrolio de Mexico" by Lopez Portillo or "Juarez" by Pere Foix; biography, including "La Fabulosa Vida de Diego Rivera" by Bertran D. Wolfe and "Edison" by C. Verdejo. There are motor repair titles like "Guia Volkswagen" by Bill Carroll and "Chilton's Manual Profesional de Aire Acondicionado."

We have cookbooks, true crime books. The range of subjects is as broad as any English language collection, in other words.

We have a fair selection of fiction titles too, but we are beginning to feel a need for more because right now most of the collection's users are fiction readers.

Fiction titles fall into three types. There are the translations of popular American titles, such as "Shogun" by James Clavell or "Yo, Judas" by Taylor Caldwell. These are the books most read by our Spanish-reading patrons at the moment. There is serious Spanish-language fiction. For example Fuentes "La Muerte de Artemio Cruz" or Donoso's "Cuentos." Then there are popular Spanish-language stories such as the myriad titles by Caridad Bravo Adams, which are similar to some of our English language paperback stories — junky but popular.

The Spanish language publishing industry is booming right now. Much of it is based in Spain, but a healthy number of books are being published in Mexico. The prices are outrageous. I estimate they are 50 to 100 percent higher than English-language books, and of much inferior quality in paper and binding. Sometimes they do not last long — a library book has to be tough to survive. But there are now more titles available in a wider range of subjects than ever before.

There are also more fine Spanish-language, fiction writers. Authors such as Carlos Fuentes, Gabriel Garcia Marquez, Jose Donoso, Mario Vargas Llosa and Julio Cortazar among others have created a renaissance in Spanish-language literature which, according to some critics, is unequaled in any other language today.

All these writers are represented in our collection, and we expect to have some new materials in soon which will enlarge the selection of fiction.

The collection is available on the upper level of the Upland Public Library, 450 N. Euclid Ave., Upland. Call Pat Castaneda 981-1033 for more information. □

Citrus growers anticipate a good year

Western citrus growers can expect much better marketing conditions for their crops this year, according to Russell L. Hanlin, president of Sunkist Growers Inc.

Speaking at the cooperative's 90th annual meeting, Hanlin said the California-Arizona citrus industry began the new season in November with manageable volumes and good quality fruit. He reported strong demand for all varieties in both domestic and export markets.

The late December freezes in Florida and Texas further strengthened demand for fresh California-Arizona navels, but Hanlin indicated that the impact would be felt most in the processed products markets where Florida growers normally channel 90 percent of their oranges.

He expects the value of valencia-type oranges for processing to improve by $20 per ton.

The Texas freeze was apparently so severe that there will be no more shipments this season, and it could be two to three years before the injured trees approach normal production.

Hanlin also reported improved prospects for export sales — notably in Japan and Korea — and said, "I feel confident in predicting that earnings for Sunkist members during 1984 will, in general, be restored to a much more satisfactory level."

He began his report on 1983 operations with the observation that, "There are few years in recent memory which yielded such dismal results for growers. Yet I know we collectively worked harder, advertised better, promoted more effectively, and sold more energetically than ever before."

For fiscal 1982-83, which ended Oct. 31, Sunkist's total sales were down 7.4 percent at $632 million, compared to the record $683 million reached in 1981-82. Payments to members declined 13 percent to $424 million.

By volume, the company's fresh fruit sales were up 18 percent or 11 million cartons, totaling 72 million cartons vs. 61 million the previous year.

Sunkist also processed 1.1 million tons of products grade fruit in 1983, compared to just 565,000 tons in 1982.

Hanlin attributed the year's lower prices and disappointing returns in part to the transition from a year of moderate volume and high prices to a year of exceptionally high volume and resulting lower prices. In 1982-83, the total volume of citrus grown in California and Arizona was the largest in history.

Added to that, he said, were the problems of marketing crops plagued by a variety of size and quality problems, exaggerated by nearly three times normal rainfall.

Valencia growers bore the brunt of it. The second largest crop in memory was flawed by small sizes, heavy scarring, regreening and other problems. Overall, the quality was so poor that more than half the crop could not be sold as fresh fruit.

The enormous navel crop stayed in the market until mid-July, effectively shortening the valencia season by six weeks.

Hanlin said Sunkist was able to move 20.6 million cartons of valencias in fresh fruit form, 3 million more than the year before, but the average FOB price dropped from the unusually high $9.30 in 1982 to about $5.30 per carton in 1983.

The company's sales of processed products, all varieties, totaled $148 million in 1983, down 2 percent. Net margins payable to members were down $15 million, largely a result of a serious weakening in the value of lemons and grapefruit for processing.

Nevertheless, Hanlin said growers could take some encouragement from the fact that sales efforts in 1983 made a significant reduction in products inventory, "which certainly hastens the day when we will see lemon and grapefruit product prices improve."

Hanlin's report included some discussion of the ongoing controversy over the federal marketing orders in the California-Arizona citrus industry.

Starting with a description of general farm policy, he said any nation that expects to feed its population and supply its markets every day of every year must produce to the point of surplus in all but the low-crop years.

"But surplus causes bankruptcy for farmers, so to encourage a constant production of abundance, our national agricultural policy actually amounts to a series of programs which protect farmers from the economic consequences of surplus," he said.

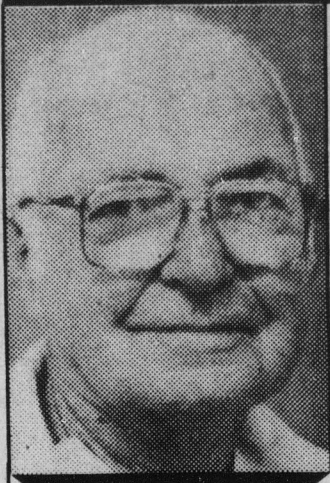

"In most of our nation, this takes the form of direct subsidies with tax dollars...But citrus farmers receive not a single dollar of these support funds," he said.

"Instead, we have relied upon marketing orders as our method of dealing with supply problems. In democratic elections, which require the concurrence of the vast majority of the producers in an industry, farmers are allowed to implement marketing orders to sensibly manage supply.

"To me, it is a lot more noble for producers to exercise self-restraint than it is, for example, to have warehouses full of deteriorating food all over the nation at the expense of taxpayers."

The annual meeting, held at the Beverly Hilton Hotel, was attended by more than 1,000 members and guests. Sunkist Growers Inc. is a farmer-owned marketing cooperative representing 6,000 citrus growers with orchards in California and Arizona. The company is headquartered in Sherman Oaks.

GLANCING BACK

Local mountains are a high point

By John H. Nicholson

There are a few more features of our local mountains that are perhaps worthy of mention. In fact, in phoning around to verify facts or dates, I have picked up points that I was not aware of, either, so let's share them too.

If, on a clear day, one looks at the prominent ridge a little to the west of San Antonio Canyon, three tall masts and a couple of buildings can be seen. Slightly further west, some lesser masts are visible. They are part of a rather complex array of communications systems, located up there for good coverage of our valley.

The three major masts are TV transmitters. They are for Channel 18, KSCI of San Bernardino; Channel 30, now temporarily out of service (it was operated by a Dr. Gene Scott, a TV evangelist, until his license was revoked); and Channel 56, KDOC of Anaheim.

There are a total of 13 buildings and masts, some hidden from the valley. All but the three TV transmitters are radio relays of one kind or another. They handle radio communications between businesses and their trucks, doctors' beepers, security alarm companies and their clients, etc. Just one of them handles radio relays for over 200 local businesses, as well as one on Catalina Island.

The complex is at about the "mile high" level on Glendora Ridge, near a spot called Brown's Flats. At night, a big white light and three red lights can be seen up there. One red light flashes off and on. It is on the highest TV tower and serves as an aircraft warning for the entire array.

Locked roadway gates close the roads to the complex from the Glendora Ridge Road, one end of which is in the southern part of Mt. Baldy Village. One can park at the gates and hike in. No hunting is permitted, but a variety of interesting wildlife can be observed.

Another major canyon, of considerable importance to our part of the valley, is Cucamonga Canyon. It breaks out in the mountains between Upland and Rancho Cucamonga, providing much good water.

The canyon lies within the Cucamonga Wilderness, so designated by the Department of the Interior, in 1964. And wilderness is an excellent description of this piece of rugged landscape. There are no developments except for a few water gathering tunnels, perhaps a few ancient miners' prospect holes and a rough forest service road part way in.

A fine stream flows down the canyon bottom, passing over three major waterfalls en route. Except at flood times, all of the stream's water is utilized, either in domestic or irrigation systems, or sunk into the underground Cucamonga Basin via a series of settling basins below the canyon mouth.

One can hike the canyon bottom, except during rainy weather or flood times, and make his way over the three falls. It is a long hike. The road along the east slope can be traveled by rough country vehicles in the winter when fire hazard is low. Gates are locked in fire season.

To get there, go north on Sapphire Street in Rancho Cucamonga to its end at Almond Street. Turn left a short way on rough dirt road, then right on a straight paved road leading to the foothills. Entering the hills, the pavement bobbles about a bit, and finally ends. That is a fine place to stop and survey the rough country beyond.

With the proper vehicle, one can continue. A left fork leads to the canyon bottom, above Second Falls. The right fork leads some 25 miles to an outlet at Lytle Creek, above Fontana — if fallen trees, washouts, landslides, or snowbanks don't block the way. It is highly advisable to phone the U.S. Forest Service for data before trying it.

Some of the canyon trails I once trod now seem to have grown over. Around the turn of the century, a trail high on the east slope led to a long abandoned charcoal kiln, well up the slope of Cucamonga Peak. Using native woods, it produced fuel for use in the valley. Naturally, the trail was called "The Charcoal Trail." The product came out by pack animal.

I have heard the tale of a Chinese employee at the kiln. He was sent to the valley on an errand. Part way down, a sound made him look back. A sizeable bear was following, sniffing at the trail. The startled Chinese exclaimed, "You like my tracks? Hokay! I make you some more." And off he raced, doing just that.

The canyon stream has long been known for its trout. About 60 years ago, my dad, then a carpenter, was rained out from his job one day. He donned boots and rainwear, took his tackle, and was off to Cucamonga Canyon for the day. When he got home, he noted having the canyon all to himself. Then, he dumped 150 trout out of his creel. Don't try that today, as I think the limit is five fish, and the game wardens can't be trusted to stay in out of the rain.

CHURCHES

Program aims to ease the hurt for addicts

By Terri Tirella

Light House Cathedral's new drug and alcohol program is near and dear to the Rev. Dick Stuart's heart.

That's because Stuart himself is a recovered alcoholic, and knows only too well what it takes to kick the insidious habit.

"We're not Alcoholics Anonymous or trying to take the place of any of those organizations. We're not a lecture group, but a support group," said Stuart.

"We want to reach out and make a person whole again," Stuart said.

The program, "New Beginning in Christ," is in its first few weeks at the Rancho Cucamonga Church, but Stuart said it is growing fast. And those who are involved have responded enthusiastically.

"This (the new church program) is the best thing that could happen," Lupe Trejo said. She is a recovered alcoholic.

"If I had something like this when I was hurting, maybe things would have gone better for me," the Rancho Cucamonga resident said.

"It's a wonderful group and we urge people to come. They don't have to be someone with a drinking problem ...," said John Bartolini, who has been sober for the past six months.

The reverend said a lot of people with drinking problems are afraid to go to church because they fear condemnation. But that won't happen at Light House Cathedral. "We are trying to aid and heal the people, not shoot them," he said.

"We sit and talk out problems together. We don't condemn anyone."

The group, made up of alcoholics, drug users, family members of those afflicted, and those who have survived the problem, meets Tuesday nights at 7 in the church Fellowship Room at 9284 Base Line. The building is shared with Alta Loma Christian Church.

Moderator for New Beginnings is Dick Lawson, formerly of AA. AA is based on the philosophy that addicts must admit they are alcoholics, that they need help, and that a power greater than themselves can help them, Stuart said. Fellowship is an important part of the program as well.

"The difference is at church we're going by the Word of God, who says we must help them heal emotionally, physically and spiritually.

The church is there to back the person and support him," he said.

The support group doesn't offer advice, but shares problems common among people with addictions. "As alcoholics, we have great insight for knowing what these people are feeling, what they depend on for emotional support," Stuart said.

"We work on improving self-esteem, replacing depression with dreams. Everyone knows right from wrong, but they need to know how to do right and how not to do wrong," he said.

Being there to listen is a key ingredient in the church program, he said. "Nobody can change anyone else, but we're there to help and encourage them to change."

We're not Alcoholics Anonymous or trying to take the place of any of those organizations. We're not a lecture group, but a support group.

Stuart said the Light House Cathedral set up the anti-drug program because the ministerial staff felt it was time for the church to involve itself in the "hurts of the community."

"People in the group range from teens to their 70s. The biggest asset is that young and old see their problems are basically the same; there's not a generation gap."

Trejo said she turned to alcohol and later added amphetamines after both her husband and one of her sons was killed.

"I did attend AA but there were so many people they don't get to you and give you a chance to pour your heart out. What I like most of all in the group is the bond that we are in Christ and we share a disease of drinking," she said.

"The message of the program does not deal with just alcohol or drugs but with any emotional problems or addictions. Before resorting to alcohol or drugs people can come to the group. We're willing to listen," she said.

"People turn to drugs or alcohol for some reason because they cannot face reality, problems, peer pressures, or just pressures in the world, they don't know where to go for help," she said.

Bartolini is trying to quit for a second time. "I stopped for a year and a half before. As long as I am in tune with God I don't drink, but the minute I take my eyes off of Him I will drink."

"God loves alcoholics. He loves sinners. They are people He wants to help; He has compassion," Bartolini said.

The longtime Rancho Cucamonga resident, now in his 40s, said he has been drinking since he was 12 years old. "I didn't care about anything. I lost my family because of alcohol, lost my job, lost everything. I was almost on skid row."

"I had been to AA, but I'd always been forced to go. I knew what I had had before (when he had stopped drinking), things were going smoothly. I had problems but conquered them. I wanted to do that (quit) again, but I couldn't do it on my own. But I looked to God and he saved me."

He said he learned by listening to other people because they have the same problems. "We talk and discuss how they handled them and share possible solutions."

Like Alcoholics Anonymous, the group is open to non-Christians as well as believers. "Many alcoholics steer clear away from organized religion. Many do not even believe in God," said Martha, an AA representative. Like many members of the organization, she does not want to reveal her surname.

And despite her affiliation with AA, she said she welcomes efforts by the church to help addicts.

"If they (alcoholics) can find help in church or AA that's great. Whatever helps them is good. Some people get psychiatric help or other types of therapy to stop their drinking."

"AA seems to have a much better success rate with 75 percent recovering," she said.

"If the organization saves a person that's great. AA has no opinions on outside groups. Anyone who wants can help," Martha said.

Light House Cathedral is offering other community programs including "Create Your Own World" for children, a class on parenting taught by Tony Ellis and a support group for people with problems called "To Live Again."

Psychotherapist to speak on PMS

The public is invited to attend the Feb. 8 meeting of the West End PMS Society when Dr. David Coombs, a practicing psychotherapist from Tustin, will speak on "You're in Control: Coping Within the Family."

The meeting will be held at 7 p.m. in the meeting/dining facility of the Upland Community Center, 352 E. C St., Upland. Admission is $1 a person, and refreshments will be served.

Currently a professional marriage and family counselor with counseling services in Tustin, Coombs also coordinates a statewide, religious association of marriage and family therapists and was the first to offer workshops in Southern California on eliminating self-defeating behaviors. He has also been a guest lecturer on behavior change and couple communication for Saddleback, Cerritos, Orange Coast and Santa Ana community colleges; insurance companies; real estate companies and the U.S. Air Force.

Coombs is a member of the graduate faculty in educational psychology at Brigham Young University, where he also is a faculty member for continuing education. He was educated at the University of Bristol in England and at USC. He received his B.S. degree from the University of Utah in 1964, his master's of science degree in 1968 and his Ed.D in 1976, both from BYU. He is the father of eight children and has been married for 19 years.

Current members of the board of directors of the PMS Society include Pat Kaufman of Upland, Robin Haulman of Alta Loma, Susannah Haney of La Verne, Margie De Nigro of Ontario and Sally Shaw of Upland, who is the new medical advisory board member. Ms. Shaw, a certified nurse practitioner in obstetrics and gynecology with Dr. Richard L. Godt, OB-GYN of Upland, spoke in January at the West End PMS Society's first public meeting.

Both men and women are invited to all West End PMS Society meetings. A registered pharmacist from Placentia will speak in March on "Progesterone Treatment: Pros and Cons"; a Riverside physician will speak in May on "PMS and Menstrual Distress"; and Stephen Fisher, a chiropractor from Ontario, will share his views on PMS.

Marine units plan Redlands show

The U.S. Marine Drum and Bugle Corps, along with the silent drill team and color guard, have scheduled their first-ever evening parade in California at the University of Redlands.

The precision drill and musical groups will perform together at 6 p.m. on March 11 at the university stadium.

The units are known for their intricate marching and musical capabilities. During the shows, the drum and bugle corps performs a variety of both martial and popular music. The silent drill team performs a series of precision rifle maneuvers without any vocal commands. Following these performances, the color guard will march with an American flag and the multicolored streamers that signify the various battles the Marine Corps has fought.

This will be the first evening parade of the groups in California. The units regularly perform in evening parades at the Washington Marine Barracks and in a memorial ceremony at the Marine Corps War Memorial Iwo Jima Monument in Arlington, Va.

Several other events will take place at the Redlands performance. Preshow events include a flying search light demonstration by the San Bernardino County Sheriff's Department Aviation Division, a canine demonstration by the Redlands Police Department, a bagpipe band performance and a display by the California Highway Patrol, California Department of Forestry and the city fire department.

The U.S. Marine Drum and Bugle Corps is stationed at the Marine Barracks, Washington, D.C. and goes on a national tour every year. The unit was formed in 1934 to augment the Marine Corps Band and to perform independently at parades and other ceremonies.

ABOUT TOWN

Jazz concert at Cal Poly

The Tom Boyles Quartet, featuring alto saxophonist Lanny Morgan, will appear in concert tonight in Cal Poly Pomona's University Union as part of the Jazz Club Night series.

Morgan, who was the lead alto saxophonist with Maynard Ferguson's big band and sextet in the 1960s, recently recorded the album, "It's About Time."

General admission tickets will be $3 per person and can be purchased at the door before the 8 p.m. program.

'Our Town' at Citrus College

Thornton Wilder's "Our Town" will be presented at Citrus College Little Theater at 8 p.m. on Friday and Saturday and at 3 p.m. on Sunday.

Donegan Smith, a professional actor who instructs the Citrus College Community Theater Workshop class, will direct the production.

Tickets are $5 if purchased before show dates and $6 at the door. The tickets can be ordered by calling 599-8339, extension 2120, through Friday.

George Jones concert slated

Country singer George Jones will perform at 8 p.m. Friday in a concert at the Orange Pavilion at the National Orange Show grounds in San Bernardino.

Jones was voted the 1981 male vocalist of the year by both the Academy of Country Music and the Country Music Association. His recent hits have included "He Stopped Loving Her Today," "Tennessee Whiskey" and "I Always Get Lucky with You."

Tickets are available at the Inland Ticket Service, 884-0178 and 825-1122, and at Mutual and Ticketmaster outlets.

Pomona College recital set

Baritone James Busterud will present a recital at 8:15 p.m. Friday in Bridges Hall of Music, Claremont.

Busterud will be accompanied by pianist Mark Haffner in the recital, offered by the Pomona College Department of Music. The recital is open to the public without charge.

Riverside symphony changes

Programs scheduled by the Riverside Symphony Orchestra for Saturday and March 31 have been switched because of a conflict in the guest artist's schedule.

Cellist John Walz will be featured in a concert on March 31, instead of Saturday as originally scheduled.

Pianist Hans Boepple will be featured in Beethoven's "Concerto No. 3 for Piano and Orchestra" on Saturday. Also on the program are works by Rossini, Gabriel Faure and W.A. Mozart.

Season tickets are available. For information, call 683-4305.

Claremont symphony concert

The Pomona College Symphony Orchestra

under the direction of permanent conductor Peter Jaffe will present a concert at 3 p.m. Sunday in Bridges Hall of Music, Claremont.

The concert is free and open to the public.

Dance company to appear

The Ririe-Woodbury Dance Company of Salt Lake City will present a special concert Feb. 1 at 8 p.m. in Garrison Theater, 231 E. 10th St., Claremont.

In addition to the concert, the six professional dancers will teach modern dance master classes at Pomona College on Feb. 2.

The Garrison Theater concert is open to the public. Admission is $3; students and senior citizens will be charged $2. The Ririe-Woodbury Dance Company's residence at Pomona College is sponsored by the college's physical education department and is financed by an anonymous donor.

Tour of Soda Springs site

The Bureau of Land Management will conduct public tours at the historic Soda Springs (Zyzyx) facility in the Mojave Desert near Baker this weekend.

Tours will begin at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. Each tour lasts about 90 minutes and visitors should bring their own water. The fee is $1 per person.

For information, call the Bureau of Land Management Barstow Resource Area office, (619) 256-3591.

Travel program in Upland

Mr. and Mrs. Gene Larson will show slides of "Classical Greece" at the Upland Public Library on Feb. 1 at 2 p.m.

The Larsons' tour of Greece features scenes of Athens, Epidauras, Sparta, Olympia, Delphi, Thessalonika and an Aegean cruise.

The slide show will be in the multipurpose room of the library, 450 N. Euclid Ave. For information, call 981-1033.

Grand jurors sought

Questionnaires are now available for area residents who want to serve on the county Grand Jury, said Patrick J. Morris, presiding judge of the San Bernardino Superior Court.

The questionnaires must be returned to the court by April 1. The grand jurors selected will serve from July 1 to June 30, 1985.

Morris said the grand jurors conduct investigations of and submit reports on county government operations and hear information on certain criminal investigations as well as issue indictments.

Grand jurors work four or five days a week and receive $10 per day, plus mileage and meals associated with their service. Grand jurors must be at least 18 years old, U.S. citizens and residents of San Bernardino for at least a year before their appointment. Potential grand jurors must also possess sufficient knowledge of English, be in possession of their natural faculties, of ordinary intelligence, of sound judgment and of fair character.

Elected public officials are not eligible.

For information or to obtain a questionnaire, call 383-2509. Questionnaires are available at the Superior Court executive office or the grand jury office in the County Courthouse, 351 N. Arrowhead Ave., San Bernardino.

Valentines can be lost forever

A return address on valentines will ensure that cupid's messages don't miss the mark.

Ontario Postmaster Edythe Armstrong said both the mailing address and return address should contain complete address information, including the full name of the recipient, apartment mailbox number or apartment number, rural route number and box number, street name and number or post office box number, city, state and Zip Code number.

Armstrong said handwriting should be legible and correct postage for oversized cards is necessary. Felt-tip pens smudge easily, she noted, and ballpoint ink is preferable.

Toxic chemicals restricted

Three highly toxic chemicals have been placed under the stringent transportation regulations governing the movement of explosives, according to the California Highway Patrol.

Now the CHP is looking for carriers who may not yet realize that cargo tanks carrying fuming nitric acid, anhydrous hydrazine or nitrogen tetroxide can move only over specific highways and stop at designated places.

The restrictions have applied to explosives transport for many years. The CHP said the three chemicals, all used in liquid rockets, were placed under the same regulations because they are extremely reactive and highly toxic. Restricting their routes and stopping places will provide an added measure of highway safety.

Transporters of the chemicals must have a CHP hazardous materials license. For information, call the CHP motor carrier section, (916) 445-6211.

Public comments sought

The Forest Service is seeking public comments for use in determining what shares of the nation's timber, range, outdoor recreation, wildlife, wilderness, water and other renewable resource outputs the agency should help produce during the next 50 years.

Public comments on the draft environmental impact statement for the 1985-2030 Resources Planning Act program will be used to update the guidelines which help to direct Forest Service activities. Those activities include cooperative assistance programs with states and private landowners, forest and range research, and management of the 191-million-acre national forest system.

Comments on the statement are due April 10 and can be sent to Zane G. Smith, regional forester, USDA Forest Service, Pacific Southwest Region, 630 Sansome St., San Francisco 94111.

CLUB FOCUS

Leads speakers set

Diane Rivord, Grace Smith and Annie Walter will be guest speakers at the next Leads Club meeting Wednesday morning. Local business women are invited to attend as guests.

Leads Club is a group of business women interested in increasing their business through networking.

For reservations and information contact Leads coordinator Lynn Craycroft, 987-4356 or Rosemary Miller, 987-9977.

Computer group to meet

For information about home computer programming, Commodore Computer Users Group will meet and share information the second Tuesday and last Friday evening of the month, 7 to 9 p.m. at Lions Community Center, 9161 Base Line Road, Rancho Cucamonga.

Elks celebrate birthdate

Rancho Cucamonga Elks of Lodge No. 2570 celebrated their sixth birthday recently with a Birthday Round-Up. Members of the Emblem Club No. 520 volunteered their services to pour coffee and other needs for the evening.

VIP Seniors to hear speaker

VIP seniors will hear a guest speaker from Casa Colina's out-patient, adult day health and rehabilitation service talk on "Alzheimer's Disease: How to Prevent it and Cure it."

The club is organizing a Las Vegas turn-around trip to Four Queens in early February. For information call 989-2447.

Seniors needing help of information call 980-2634 for an appointment, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. weekdays.

String musicians sought

The Montclair Starlite Symphonette, a city-sponsored orchestra now in its 15th season, is seeking additional members in all sections — especially the strings.

The orchestra, a Department of Human Services recreational activity, acts as a goodwill ambassador for the city of Montclair. Conducted by Hollis Moore, it rehearses in the recreation facility building of the Montclair Civic Center Wednesday evenings, 7:30 p.m. No auditions are required.

The concerts are now given in the community building. More information can be obtained from Harve Edwards, manager, 986-4321.

Will eye care franchises hurt consumers?

Will removal of restrictive California regulations barring the business coupling of optometrists with major optical businesses — the so-called franchising of eye care — be beneficial to consumers, bringing them glasses and other vision aids at a lower price?

Or will such franchised optometric centers controlled by manufacturers or retailers of the products they sell result in a serious decline in competition, and result eventually in higher prices for the consumer?

That battle — not a new one in Sacramento since the proposal has been fought and debated for more than six years — is heating up again.

At least three bills are currently in the Legislature that would, in effect, repeal laws that have been on the books since 1949 requiring complete separation between prescribing optometrists and the providers of the glasses and other vision aids that they prescribe.

Assembly Bill 1926, with Assemblyman Patrick Johnston, D-Stockton, is now on the Assembly floor's inactive file awaiting a decision by the author as to when he will revive it; and another Johnston bill, AB 1925, is now before the Assembly Ways and Means Committee. Other legislation, 1097, by Sen. Ken Maddy, R-Fresno, is in the Senate's Business and Professions Committee.

Johnston, pointing to a recent study by the Federal Trade Commission that concluded that "optometrists affiliated with major optical businesses charge significantly less for contact lenses than other eye care professionals while providing comparable quality, charged that the report "offers further evidence that California's restrictive optometric practice laws are detrimental to consumers, seniors and low-income groups."

He added that "the study reinforces my belief that passage of AB 1925 and AB 1926 would bring more eye care to more people at lower cost, such as we see in most other states."

The California Optometric Association, however, Wednesday (Jan. 11) took angry issue with the FTC report, charging that it was "only a staff finding and has not been approved by the FTC itself" and that it was an "incomplete and non-definitive study."

'Tea concert' planned by S.B. museum

The second free Sunday "tea concert" sponsored by the San Bernardino County Museum and the Inland Master Chorale will be Sunday at 3 p.m.

Contralto Diane David and baritone Wayne Shepperd will be accompanied by pianist JoLene Jolly in the concert in Fisk Auditorium at the museum, 2024 Orange Tree Lane, Redlands.

February "tea concerts" will include "Opera Encounters" by the Inland Opera Company on Feb. 12, and Gianna Pirrelli and Jack Andriese in "Piano-Four-Hands" on Feb. 26.

Other programs will include Marjorie Tayloe, harpist-singer, March 18; Recorder Society, March 25; Cantobello Chorale of Colton, April 1; University of Redlands Community Music School, April 15; Merrill Chamber Group of Victorville, April 29; Inland Master Chorale, May 13; Gwendolyn Roberts, May 20.

EXERCISE AND PSYCHOLOGICAL WELL-BEING

Exercise and depression simply do not go together! It's hard to exercise when you're depressed...and it's hard to be depressed when you're exercising.

One reason is brain chemistry: Strenuous exercise triggers the release of substances in the brain with opiate-like properties. These make pain—physical and psychological—diminish and increase a sense of well-being. This probably accounts for the famous "runner's high".

Another factor is the positive self-concept which results from facing and surmounting a challenge. The day you feel most sluggish and inert is the very time you will feel best for having taken a brisk walk or bicycled to town and back.

More complicated are those self-image changes that have to do with a change in body-image. Depressed, negative individuals frequently feel themselves to be weak, flabby, passive and unhealthy. But positive body changes that come with regular exercise are incompatible with such a self-appraisal.

The next time you feel like running from your problems—run FOR them instead!

Teacher takes off for Never-Never Land

After directing 300 plays and building Claremont High School's drama program from the ground up, Don Fruechte says it's time for a breather.

So, having completed the current run of the musical "Peter Pan" last weekend, Claremont's leading backstage personality has taken his first sabbatical in 21 years at the school.

Next fall, Fruechte will again be back to teaching student actors and stage technicians and directing Claremont High theater productions.

At 50, Fruechte is something of an institution at the high school, which didn't even have a drama program when he was hired to teach English in 1963.

His name is mentioned in the school's office and employee Judy Applebee volunteers: "He is a very,

Some of the plays, like "Peter Pan," are the product of students enrolled in two junior theater classes. Others are cast by auditions open to all students.

Besides two theater classes, courses are offered in acting, technical theater and stage makeup. Fruechte believes the program is one of the best and most diverse offered.

"I think the Claremont area has a lot of very talented young people... in the performing arts," Fruechte said. "We have some very fine young actors."

Former student Park believes the key to Fruechte's success is the way he puts students in charge.

"He really presented the challenge to the students, and let them carry it off," Park said. "That experience has been an integral part of my career."

Fruechte observed that today's students aren't as inclined to immerse degrees at the University of Houston.

But his thoughts his last week were still on the "Peter Pan" production, particularly on changing the show's huge sets in the confines of the Claremont High School Theatre stage. "Sometimes," he noted, "it's a better show backstage than on-stage."

CPR courses are available

very able drama teacher. We are lucky to have him."

"I can't say enough positive about him," said Tom Park, a former student who is now in charge of stage crews and equipment for Metro Media's "Thicke of the Night" TV program.

Other Fruechte students have gone on to early successes in the profession.

John Lee Beatty, who designed sets and costumes for a school production of "Gigi," has since won a Tony Award for stage design. Martin Hewitt, a 1976 graduate, starred opposite Brooke Shields in the movie "Endless Love." Richard Johnson is an art director for "Three's Company" and other TV productions.

But it's "Peter Pan" — complete with a pirate ship, flying actors and a cast of 80 students — that consumed Fruechte's thoughts of late.

"This is the first time I've ever done 'Peter Pan' — and it may be my last," Fruechte joked before opening night. "It's a big, big show. The sets are monumental."

Claremont students put on five or six productions every year, and stage a Broadway musical every other year.

themselves in theater as students once were.

"I think maybe back, say 10 or 15 years ago, they selected one activity they'd like to be involved in — band, athletics or theater — and gave 200 percent of their time to that," said Fruechte.

"The change I've noticed over the last few years is, kids are involved in more things. It's not just pick one thing, and that's all you do."

The director is quick to admit that the high school stage is not a Hollywood script. That's one reason he decided to take his first sabbatical.

"You need a breather to get your sanity back, to refresh yourself and come up with new ideas," he explained.

"I think what I'm doing is very, very fatiguing, demanding work. But it's also very rewarding to see how the kids are developing and maturing."

Fruechte planned to spend the spring sabbatical visiting schools in neighboring states and studying their theater programs. The travel will also take him home to Texas, where he earned his bachelor's and master's

Hank Williams to headline at Indio show

Country-western music fans will be in for a treat when the National Date Festival in Indio opens with an appearance by Hank Williams Jr.

Williams will headline a three-hour country-western show on the festival's opening night, Feb. 17. The concert will begin at 7:30 p.m.

Backing Williams will be Mel McDaniel and his band, Oklahoma Wind. Opening the show will be Viva/Warner recording artists California. Their first album is slated to be released Feb. 1 and the festival will be the first stop on their tour of the Western United States.

The festival's arena has 3,500 seats, but extra bleachers are being brought in for the one-night show and should provide space for 8,000, according to festival spokesman Frank Adams.

The show, he said, will follow the festival's traditional Arabian Nights Pageant. General admission tickets are $10 at the box office and $10 advance; reserved advance tickets are $15. Advance tickets include festival admission, $4. Tickets are available through all Ticketron outlets.

Williams, son of country music's greatest legend, performed for the first time in Swainsboro, Ga. at the age of 8. Three years later, he was on the stage of the Grand Old Opry.

He produced a million-selling soundtrack for "Your Cheatin' Heart," the movie about his father's life, and, together with Johnny Cash, performed in the biggest money-grossing show in the history of country music. That concert at Cobo Hall netted $90,000 in one evening.

But later in his career he faced a tough decision. He walked away from Nashville to play his own kind of country music, and he made a success of it.

Williams has been inducted into the Stars Hall of Fame in Orlando, Fla. Music City News named him "1980's Most Promising Male Artist of the Year."

Although he still records regularly, Williams spends much of his time touring the country to perform in concerts, often playing as many as ten different instruments per show.

McDaniel's songs consistently do well in the country-western charts. His current "I Call It Love" is rated number 15 by Billboard magazine.

ENTERTAINMENT & DINING GUIDE

Musicians gearing up to do battle

By Terri Tirella

Coupling heavy metal rock music with something on the more classical side might not have the symphonic quality of a philharmonic orchestra but the two will combine at Chaffey College's "Battle of the Bands," Sunday from 1 to 6 p.m. in the Little Theatre, not musically but for a fund raiser.

This year's bands will include Rude Awakening, Dark Age, Can Do, Turning Point and Message, all groups from the Rancho Cucamonga, Upland and Ontario area. Riverside will be represented by Speakeasy and the Sedans. A group named What? has members from the Glendora, West Covina area.

Chaffey's "Battle of the Bands" differs from other similar competitions in that the groups are judged not by audience applause but by a panel of 10 judges.

"Each band is judged on musical aspects, stage presence, general appearance, professionalism, instrument mix, crowd reaction, crowd interaction and how tight they play together," said George Urena, organizer of the event.

Originality is another criteria judges consider. "There are three sections on originality ... If the band plays all original songs (they are judged on) how original their original songs were. If the band copies, how well they copy the original. If they do their own arranging of previously recorded material, how well the music was arranged," Urena said.

With help from Chaffey's music department, a committee of former students will coordinate the

Now that the Super Bowl is history and everyone has collected or paid their bets, it's time to turn our thoughts to delicious dining.

Las Cazuelitas at 186 N. Second Ave. in downtown Upland has something brand new on their menu, camarones (shrimp) rancheros. Of course everything on the menu bears looking into. The food is very good and the prices are within just about everyone's budget for either breakfast, lunch or dinner.

Breakfasts are served from 8:30 until 11:30 with prices ranging from $1.75 to $3.50. Dinners and combination dinners are served after 5 p.m. and include soup or salad, beans, rice and tortillas with prices ranging from $3.75 to $5.50.

performing to raise money for a classical music program."

Urena, along with another Chaffey alumni Tom Franks, put together the first "Battle of the Bands" in 1982 and raised $1,000 for the music department. Both alumni play rock 'n' roll style of music and both were students of Joyce Shannon, music department head.

"She was a driving force in both of our musical careers or musical lives," he said. "The education we got can carry into any type of music."

One reason for the concert is to give young musicians exposure to what is available at Chaffey College. "Even if they were not interested in attending classes before, if they come up here they may realize there is something for them."

Giving amateur musicians an opportunity to play is another reason for the concert. "This is one of the few places an original rock 'n' roll band can play. A top 40s band or a casual band that has a wide variety of music can always play wedding receptions. Original rock 'n' roll bands trying to make it big really have no place to play," Urena said.

But the biggest reason for the fourth "Battle of the Bands" is fund raising, according to Shannon.

"Our budget was cut so drastically, it's gone from $15,000 to $3,000. We have had no new equipment. We used to be able to do a choir concert with a professional orchestra two or three times a year. Now I don't know if we'll be able to have even one," she said.

Shannon said other departments also feel the budget cuts but the music and theatre department was affected more sharply because equipment

Movie moguls better watch out — students at Cucamonga Junior High School are starting their film careers early.

Students in Linda Weber's seventh and eighth grade animation class are finishing up their final projects using two- and three-dimensional characters and sets.

The animation class, which began this September, is new in the area of fine arts at Cucamonga Junior High. Initial expenses were financed School Improvement Funds. The school had to add a class in the fine arts subject area it didn't currently already offer to qualify for the funding, according to the school principal, Sherry Nagel.

Art, ceramics, and photography number among the arts and crafts classes taught at the junior high school, so after researching possibilities, animation was chosen.

The animation class can incorporate all the arts in one project. Students made their first film with flip-books. They utilized a series of 124 drawings. Final projects include story lines with clay characters or designs made by sand animation.

Careful planning goes into the filming process. Students have to turn in scripts or a synopsis of a script help them find and solve any potential filming problems before they actually occur, according to Weber.

"Our biggest frustration is not having our cameras come in. We have one working camera and its been hard," Weber said. Two cameras were ordered before the class started. The class had access to two borrowed cameras but the equipment was faulty and the resulting films couldn't be used.

"The students need to see their work on film to become motivated," she said. Next semester new animation students will start their first week by making a 10-second film using a piece of clay.

"The film will show them what they have done and gives them experience using the camera. They can get their feet wet and have films to critique and learn from," she said.

Weber said she expects more elaborate sets from her next group of students. "They'll have mistakes from this class to learn by."

One of the problems the current animation class has suffered from is selective vision. "They don't see the lines on their cardboard sets where corners meet. The eye overlooks things like that but the camera is objective, it sees all," Weber said.

Another problem when filming the clay figures is lighting versus shrinkage. "The clay figures may be shrinking or melting gradually while students are filming. The students may not notice it until the object falls over, but on film you'll see it in motion, moving fast," the art teacher said.

One student, Steen Shoar, is using his computer skills in the class. His computer animation will be dubbed "Shark Atac."

"I worked it all out on paper in blocks first," the seventh grader said. "I can manipulate the shark on the screen. I'll move it, then take a picture of it."

The story line revolves around a shark. It swims around until it finds a person in a boat. The person is knocked out of the boat and becomes shark food. "There's a splash of red blood on the screen at the end," Shoar said.

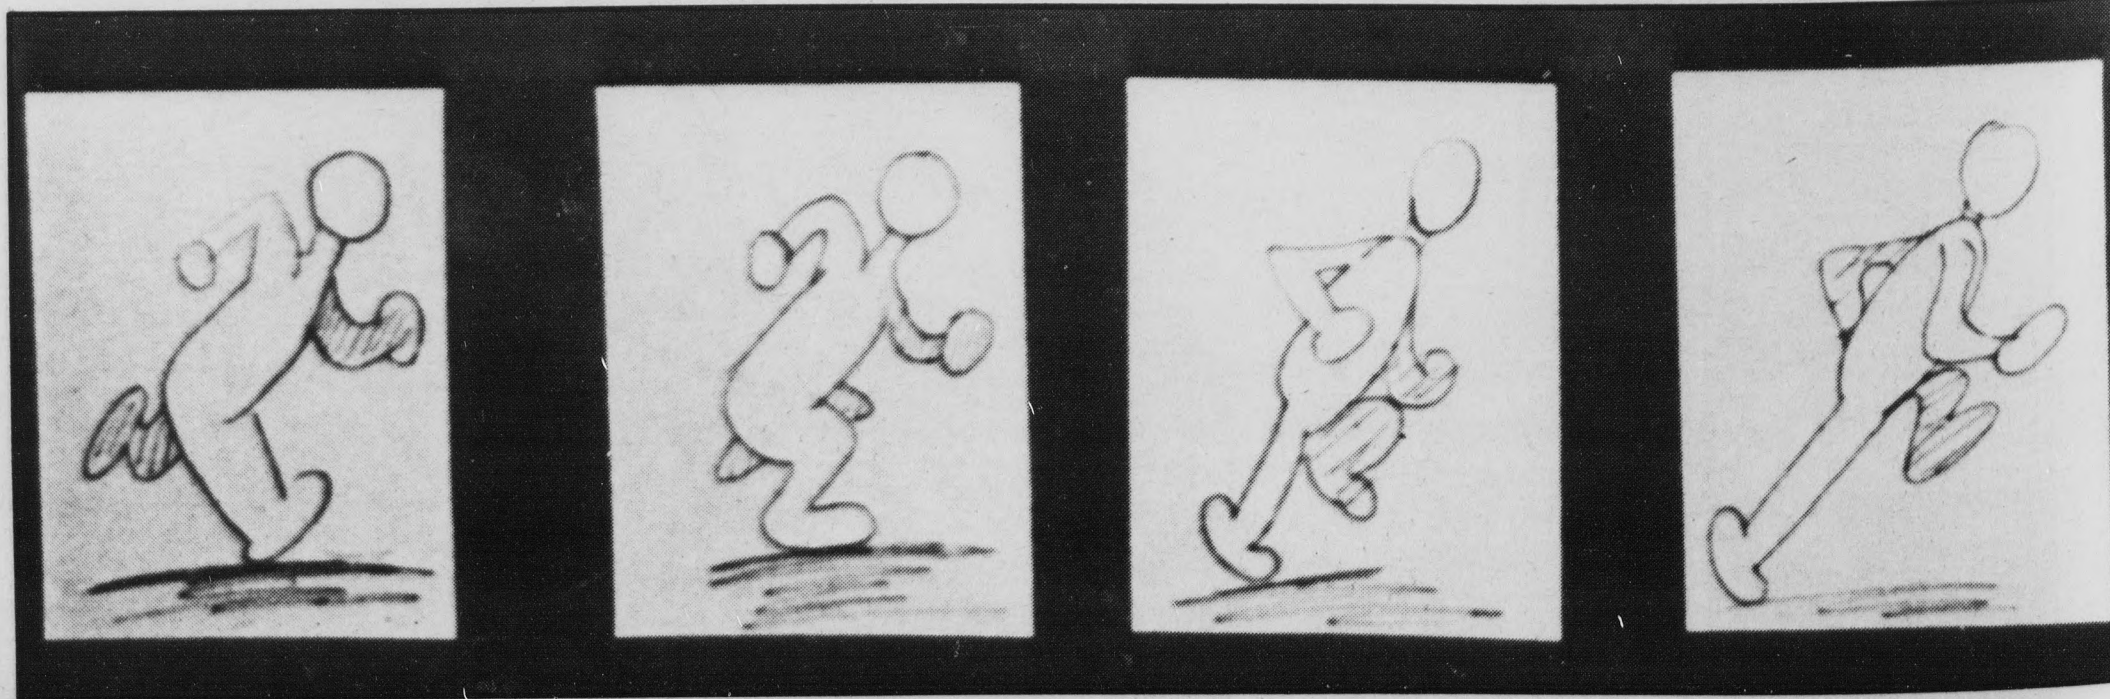

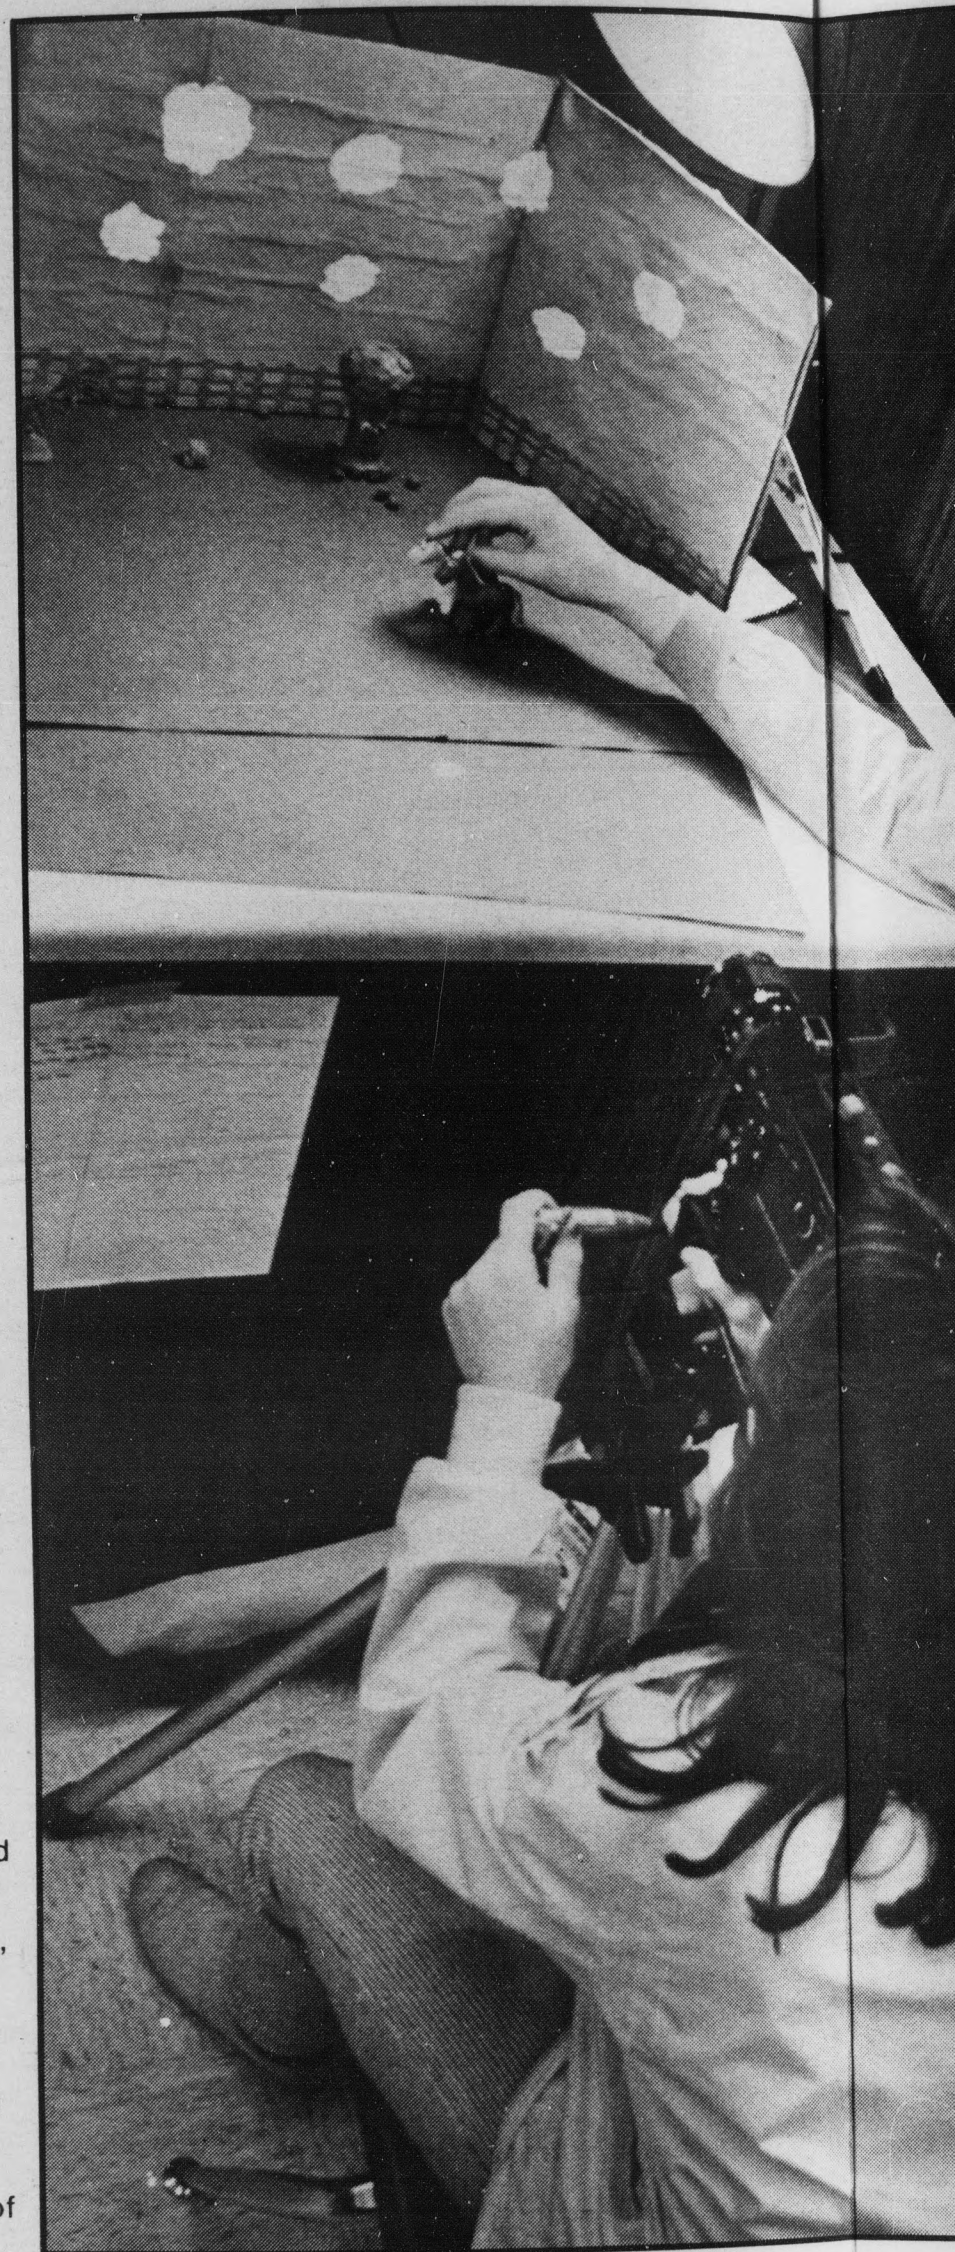

"Terror in Cucamonga," is about a dinosaur that eats local citizens while wandering through town. "We take the person's body a piece at a time and put it in the dinosaur's mouth (per frame) starting with the head," John Dowling, another animation student, said.

Not all the films revolve around violence. Dionne Treadway and Tricia Turk's film, "The Apple Tree" shows two horses enjoying a day in the country before coming to the apple tree for a bite.

"It's a fun class," Treadway said. "We've had to learn patience. In our first film we had to draw over 100 pictures. (Filming with clay figures) takes more time because you have to move everything just a little bit at a time."

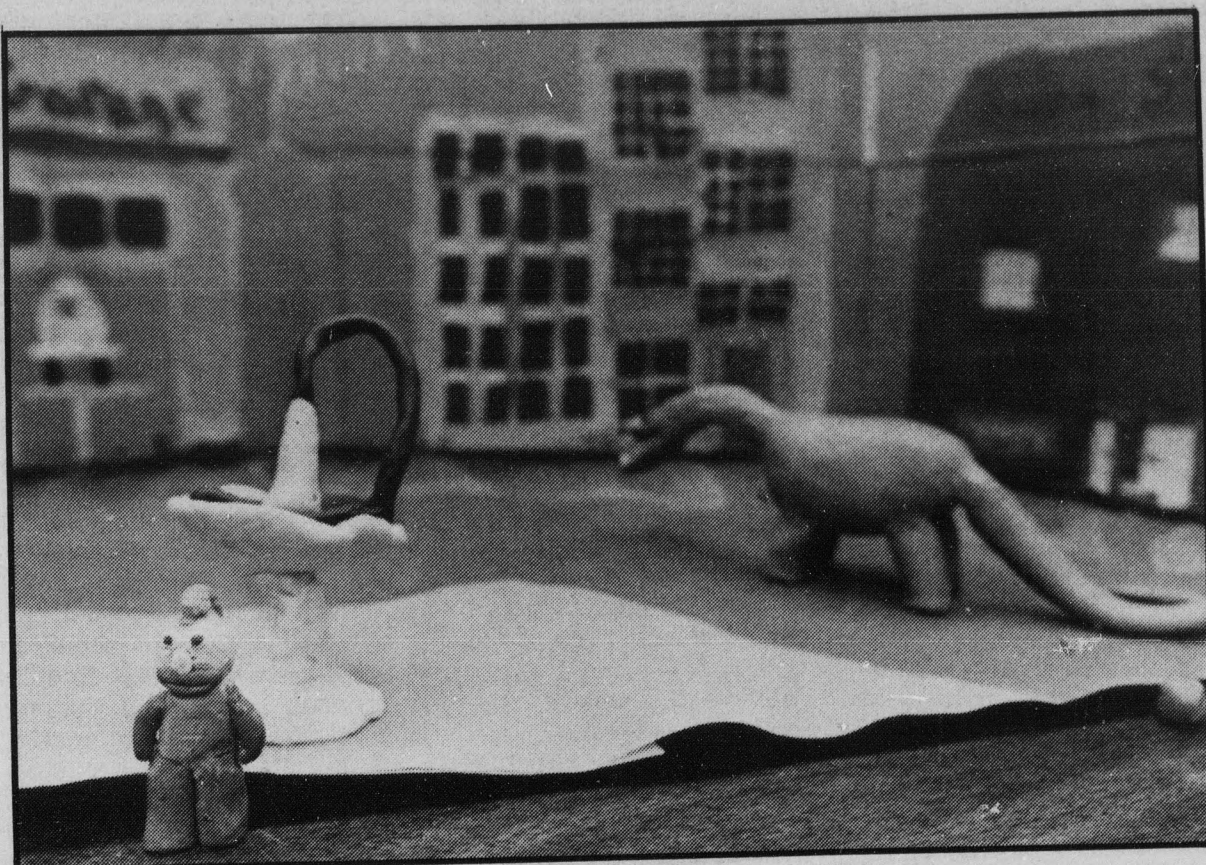

In sand animation, students move shapes across a piece of dark construction paper, writing words, drawing characters or forming designs. "Some of the students are using colored sand or plain white table salt in their filming," Weber said.

Weber said she will have a film festival of all her animation students' work in May.

Friends share ride in WWI biplane

By Samuel J. Tolmasoff

One Sunday morning a friend of my brother's came over in a model-T Ford and asked:

"How about a trip to the airport? The papers say they're putting on some kind of air show, and it's free."

That was back in 1926 when I was 11 and my brother and his buddy were both 16. For an older person, this friend was a pretty good guy.

"How about coming along?" he asked me. "And bring along a friend."

I got Al, my next door neighbor and best friend to come with us.

We took a long tedious journey toward the beach, away out in the country to what was then known as Clover Field. I'm pretty sure that later on it became part of the Los Angeles International Airport.

There was absolutely no clover around: it was midsummer; hot, dry, dusty and the field was covered with a prickly stubble from an oat crop that had just been harvested. Overall there was a smell of hot oil and gasoline exhaust fumes. But there were quite a few planes — this was a widely publicized barnstorming air show and it had drawn a lot of people.

Some of the braver spectators were plunking down $2 each for a five-minute airplane flight. It was fascinating to see all those planes taking off and landing.

My brother and his pal had wandered off somewhere, so Al and I were left to our own resources. We watched one particular plane take off and land several times.

"Who's next?" the pilot asked the crowd after his last landing. Apparently he had run out of brave souls or those with the means for a flight. He coaxed the crowd, but there were no takers. He pulled out a watch, checked the time and decided it wasn't quite late enough to quit for the day.

He was a tall, lanky fair-haired young man, and as he looked over the crowd his eyes lighted on us.

"Come on over here, boys!" he called to us. "How would you like to go for a ride?"

"We'd sure like to," I answered. "But we don't have enough money."

"Well, how much do you have?" he asked.

We quickly pooled our assets and came up with the grand total of 80 cents in change.

"I'll tell you what, since you're so small, I'll take both of you up as one passenger for the 80 cents. Is it a deal?"

We quickly thrust our money at him before he could change his mind.

It was an old, World War I biplane — I think it was called "Jenny." It was worn and battered but it could fly; that's all we were interested in.

He strapped both of us into the front seat with a single belt. He taxied slowly to the end of the field, turned and revved up the engine.

The scary thrill as we started rolling down the field with the engine roaring in our ears! I looked down and — horrors! — there was no bottom under us except for a thin metal bar for our feet! I watched the stubble of the oat field whizz by faster and faster. Then the field started to recede under us and we were flying.

The pilot flew us around for about 15 minutes, amused by our loud yells and exclamations that could hardly be heard above the wind whipping around our heads and the roaring of the engine. He banked and turned, zoomed up, then down steeply, lifting our stomachs into our throats.

Nothing too spectacular, just enough to satisfy two boys craving excitement. We roared and soared, even banked at an almost 90 degree angle, and we finally landed.

As the pilot cut the switch on the engine the silence was deafening. He unstrapped us and we climbed out a little giddily.

"How did you boys like the ride?" he asked.

"Oh, fine. And thank you very much."

As we walked away from the plane with our heads still up in the clouds, we ran into my brother and his friend.

"Were you up in that airplane?" my brother asked me.

"We sure were!" I answered. He was exasperated.

"You damn fool," he said. "Suppose you were killed. How in the world would I explain that to father and mother?"

I had never given a thought to being killed; and all I could think of was the magic of the flight and the tall, lanky, fair-haired pilot who had made it possible.

'Magic of Mexico' film to be shown at Claremont theater

"Magic of Mexico" will be the third presentation of the Claremont Travel Film Series' 30th season at 2 and 8 p.m. Friday in Garrison Theater, Claremont.

Thayer Soule will present his film in person and describe some of the thefts at archeological zones in Mexico as well as various other occasions and sights in that country.

For 50 years, Mexico has been Soule's favorite country for he finds it glows with color, tingles with excitement, has a charm that is endearing and enduring.

The film will open with a view of the Rio Grande flowing through desert, followed by cool surprises in the nearby mountains at Huasteca Canyon and Horsetail Falls. The new Chihuahua Al Pacifico Railroad climbs to Copper Canyon, which is larger and deeper than the Grand Canyon, but located in the heart of a towering mountain range.

From there the film will take the armchair travelers down to the Pacific coast at Mazatlan and by ferry across the Sea of Cortez to Baja California with its blue bays and sparkling beaches.

After a view of Acapulco, still Mexico's prime resort, the film will continue on to Yucatan and a view of Cozumel, then the Mayan ceremonial centers of Chichen Itza and Uxmal and the remote, mysterious Palenque that was the seat of a great ruler and on to the great Pyramids of Teotihuacan.

In Mexico City, now the largest in the world, will be seen Guadalupe Shrine, traffic on the Paseo de la Reforma, Chapultepec Park, the Museum of Anthropology, the Zocalo after dark, a number by the famed Ballet Folklorico and a view of the volcanoes Popocatepetl and

Firm plans to launch its own rocket ship

A private company says it still plans to use a patch of Pacific Ocean off San Diego as a launching pad for its free-enterprise rockets, even though the first blast-off is running two months behind schedule.

"Things always take a little longer than we thought they would, but we are go for a launch in February," said Roy MacDonald of the company, Starstruck Inc., in Redwood City.

The Dolphin rocket's unique engines were tested successfully last month, and federal permits have been obtained, MacDonald said in a telephone interview.

"We've got all our components ready, and we're putting it together at our assembly site here in Redwood City," he said. "We've done most of that already. We're buttoning up some of the last parts, and then we'll truck it down to Southern California, put it in the water and send it up."

Starstruck plans to tow a 50-foot Dolphin about 150 miles off San Diego and let it bob upright in the ocean until its engines are fired. The company says the rocket should reach an altitude of about 70 miles before its two main parts float back to the sea under parachutes.

"They'll be recovered, and most of the parts will be reusable, so we'll use them to make another rocket," MacDonald said.

He said a second Dolphin is already being built "and that should be ready for launch soon after the first."

The prototypes are supposed to prove the concept, especially the new fuel mixture of liquid oxygen and synthetic rubber, before a new generation is designed to get Starstruck into the booming satellite-launching business.

MacDonald is not predicting when a commercial payload might go up.

The company, backed by entrepreneurs from computer companies in the surrounding Silicon Valley, hopes eventually to claim a piece of the lucrative global trade of putting communication satellites into space. The competitors now are, essentially, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's space shuttle and the European Space Agency's Ariane rocket.

Another private company, Space Services Inc. of Houston, has successfully tested its Conestoga rocket, and some giant aerospace companies reportedly are considering using the experience gained through NASA contracts to enter the private rocket business.

Starstruck's plans for an ocean launching, chosen to avoid the expense of building a ground-based launching site and the regulatory morass this would involve, has never been tried.

Nor has the Dolphin's fuel mixture, which is billed as inherently safe — in contrast to the highly explosive rocket fuels normally used.

The Dolphin rockets will be powered, Starstruck said, by releasing liquid oxygen into a honeycomb made of a common synthetic rubber, polybutadiene. □

You can free your car from snow if prepared

Motorists traveling to snow play areas, ski resorts or places where snow is likely are advised by the Automobile Club of Southern California to be prepared in case their vehicles get stuck in the snow.

Donald D. Treichler, the auto club's public safety manager, said drivers can help free cars that aren't too seriously immobilized if they follow simple precautions — such as carrying a shovel and sand in the trunk — and know a few "tricks of the trade."

He offers these suggestions for freeing a vehicle:

- Try forming a runway in deep snow by shoveling a path or rocking the car gently backward and forward in increasing lengths, until a runway of about a car's length is formed ahead of the wheels.
- Then try to drive the car out. Shift from reverse to low repeatedly while passengers or helpers push from the sides of the car, where they'll be clear if your "take-off" is successful. (Don't do this more than a few minutes as the transmission can be damaged easily.) Use gentle, steady pressure on the accelerator. Flooring the gas pedal will only cause the rear wheels to spin.

Will the eyes soon have it with proposed mergers?

Dr. Allan N. Freid, O.D., president of the optometric association, Wednesday fired off a written request to the FTC's Bureau of Consumer Protection asking that the FTC "examine, investigate and audit franchised optometric centers where many facets of the practice, including a variety of treatment decisions, are controlled by the manufacturer or retailer."

The state optometric spokesman said that "we are gravely concerned with the impact this pending legislation would have on the quality of vision care in California and the visual health of all Californians. The consumer public would be jeopardized if a large manufacturer or corporation with pecuniary profits as its principal goal or motive were allowed to control the professional judgment or decision rendered by the medical profession."

Freid cited a series of what he called "questionable practices which were revealed in court transcripts and sworn affidavits in the states of Michigan and Texas (among some 35 states which permit business affiliations between prescribing professionals and optometric supply providers):

— "Instances where company stores were ordered to fill prescriptions with lenses other than those prescribed by the doctor.

— "Where company managers were instructed to report doctors if they did not prescribe new glasses for a patient, even if the patient had no need for the lens prescription.

— "Where the company encouraged its managers and supervisors to fill written prescriptions for glasses from stock lenses ... although none of the stock lenses at hand met the requirements of the written prescriptions.

— "Where 90 percent of the patients were reported to have had glasses that were wrong for them.

— "And instances where company store employees were reportedly told to charge for oversized lenses when the lenses were not oversized."

Freid added "the consumer protection laws which are at the heart of this controversy were designed by the Legislature to prevent prescribing professionals from receiving kickbacks and hidden profits from sales of prescribed products and, in turn, to prevent excessive prices to the public as a result of anti-competitive practices.

Your unnotified move can cost you time

Motorists who fail to tell the Department of Motor Vehicles when they move are likely to miss the letters telling them they can get drivers license extensions without re-examination based on their clean driving record, and vehicle registration renewal notices. Change of address forms are available at DMV offices and motorists can have the forms sent to them.

Women donate radio to city for possible emergency use

The Upland Women's Club recently donated funds for the purchase of a radio for emergency communications for the city of Upland. The radio has been placed in one of the fire stations.

Division Chief Peter Bryan said the it can be used in a mobile unit or in the Emergency Operations Center (EOC) and the radio will be operated by the West End District of RACES (Radio Amateur Civil Emergency Service).

Upland expects to utilize the services of RACES during any major emergency (earthquake, flood, evacuation etc.) by providing emergency communication.

RACES has the ability to communicate on hundreds of frequencies and has been used extensively during recent disaster drills for communications and disaster survey. The organization is both state and nationwide.

The EOC is currently located within the Civic Center area and houses radios and telephones for use during emergency conditions.

WeTIP gets arrests and convictions

WeTIP operators have taken 52,521 anonymous tips which have resulted in 5,755 arrests and 2,025 convictions since the program began 11 years ago.

More than 120 of the arrested criminals were arsonists who were responsible for more than $12 million dollars worth of damaged property. Almost $106 million in illegal drugs have been seized because of information called into WeTIP.

WeTIP operators are ready to take information on all major crimes, seven days a week, 24 hours a day. Any person who has knowledge of a crime can report the information anonymously to WeTIP by calling, toll free, 1-800-78-CRIME.

Operators will ask questions designed to obtain the maximum information to assist law enforcement in making arrests.

Rewards of up to $500 are available to citizens seeking this incentive when information leads to an arrest and conviction.

Central School District boundaries to change

With the addition of Bear Gulch Elementary School next September, existing Central School District boundaries will soon become obsolete.

To look into the matter of redesigning the borders, the school board has approved formation of a Boundary Advisory Committee.

The committee will be made up of one elementary school principal, four certificated staff members, seven parents (two from each elementary school and one from the junior high) and one classified employee, with its conclusions considered by the board before trustees redesign boundaries.

The principal and one certificated member will not have voting power on the committee. Trustee Pam Wright asked for a "very low minimal" of board input into the committee's actions.

Photography contest set during June

Professional and amateur still photographers will again have the chance to compete and display their photographic endeavors at the 35th International Exhibition of Photography.

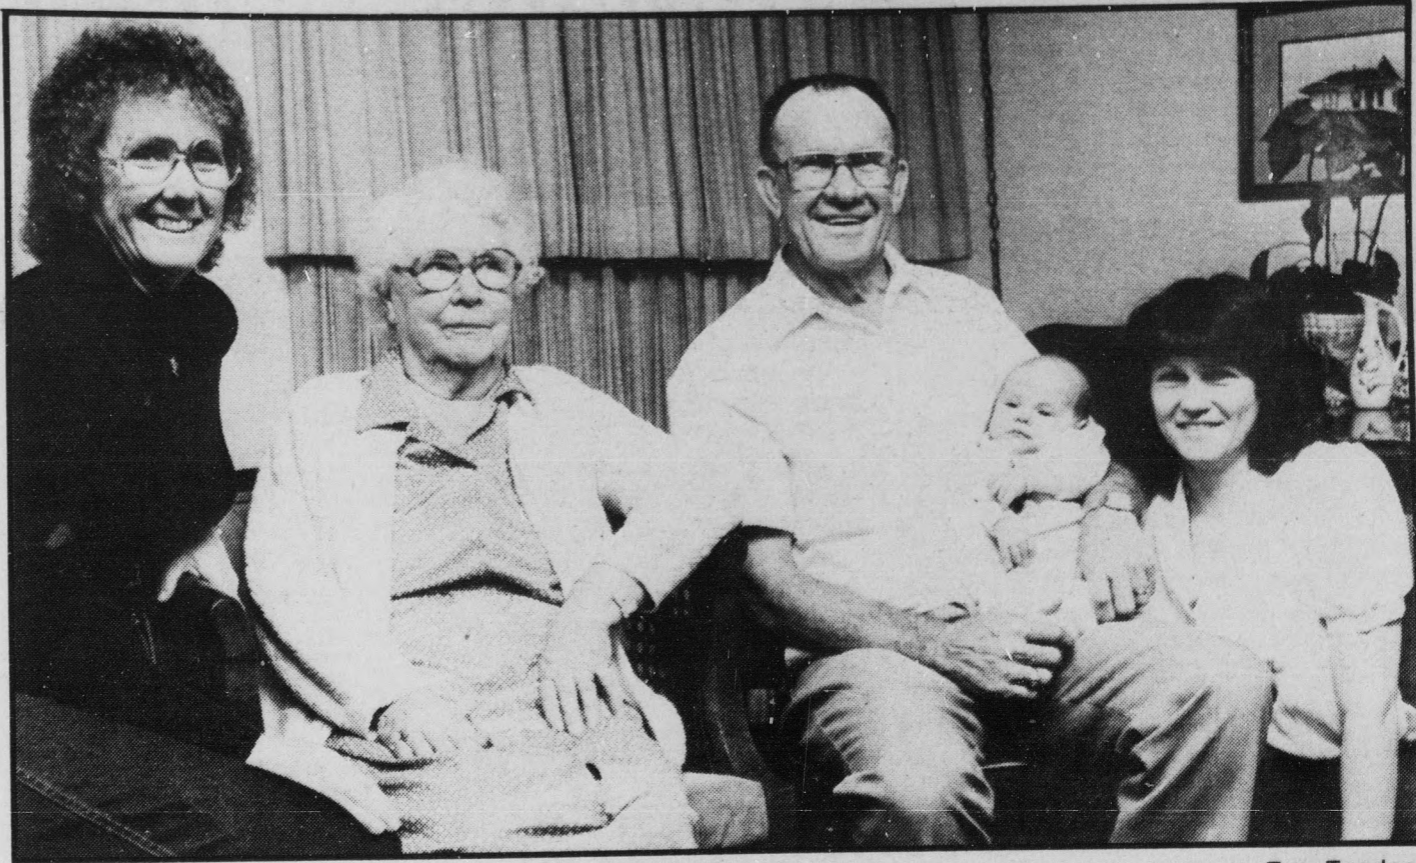

This annual photographic contest will be held June 14 through July 1 at the 103rd Southern California Exposition in co-operation with the U.S. Navy's Pacific Fleet Audiovisual Command.

There are two categories: Color print and black and white (monochrome) print. Entrants may submit up to 10 prints at a fee of $3 for each entry. The deadline for entries is 5 p.m., Friday, April 27.

A six-member judging panel, all experts in the field of photography, will select the winners on May 4. Return/claim cards will be mailed Saturday, May 18.

'Magic of Mexico' travel film to be shown

Ixtaccihuatl as seen from the Floating Gardens of Xochimilco. Winding up the first reel will be views of the walled Hacienda San Miguel Regla, one of the best-kept secrets of Mexico, then quiet waterways, gushing waterfalls and a horseback ride through high country to nearby Santa Maria Regla.

In the second reel, Soule uses his personal films to look back to the opening of the Pan American Highway in 1936 when Mexico City still was partly small town. The pictures will show the changes that took place in the years that followed.

Then it will be on to Taxco, which is protected by law from architectural change. Santa Prisca church, gift of the mining king Jose de la Borda, is described as perhaps the finest ecclesiastical building in the Americas.

Traveling further south, the film will show Fortin at the base of snowcapped Mount Orizaba, third highest peak in North America, quiet gardens of Quinta Las Animas and the inclined railroad at Tuxpango.

In advance publicity, Soule notes that Southern Mexico is not as developed as the north and a few steps off the main road take the viewers back 400 years to the delights of the main plaza of Oaxaca, including the golden treasures from Tomb Seven of nearby Monte Alban.

After depicting San Cristobal de las Casas, a high, cool island in the sky, the film will go on to the Central Plateau, north of Mexico City to San Miguel de Allende and the little town of Zimapan.

Closing the film will be scenes of the high mountain forests of Michoacan, the garden state of Mexico; fountains and waterfalls in Uruapan; Patzcuaro, the heart of the old Tarascan Indian Empire; basket makers of Ihuatzio; and Lake Patzcuaro, with its strange oriental beauty.

The Claremont Travel Film Series is a benefit project for the Development Fund of Pomona College.

Limited single admission tickets for "Magic of Mexico" are available for both the afternoon and evening performances. Call 626-1643 for more information.

Tickets on sale for women's club benefit 'A Fashionable Brunch'

Tickets now are on sale for the Foothill Valley Business and Professional Women's Club's fashion show and brunch, "A Fashionable Brunch," to be staged at 10:30 a.m. Feb. 11 at Griswold's Pavilion, Claremont.

The show cost is $13 a person, and more information is available by calling Agnes Bonessa at 986-6986 or Linda Yao at 981-1033.

Jo Ann Fitzgibbons of Fitzgibbons Color and Fashion Center, will coordinate the show, focusing on how to build a flexible wardrobe for busy, active women.

"You're going to come away from the show with the some basic lessons on wardrobe planning," says Mrs. Fitzgibbons.

Foothill Valley BPW is a local chapter of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's organization whose objective is to elevate the standards for women in business and the professions.

Proceeds from the fashion show will be used to fund a variety of club activities, two of which are monthly programs and foundation. The latter is a program, established at the national level, which sponsors research in areas that are of interest to women. Foundation also provides scholarships for women seeking higher education.

This hospital treats children to playtime

A nurse cradling a wide-eyed toddler in her arms pushed open the hospital room door, carried the child inside and gently set her on the floor.

Danielle Fontenot took one look around her, stood up and ran as fast as her tiny legs could propel her, not toward the door and possible freedom, as might have been expected, but right into the middle of the room. There, she plopped down on the floor and began smiling as she looked around the room.

Instead of being filled with hospital beds, IV stands and blinking monitors, the room was filled with toys.

As Danielle waddled from toy to toy with her green print hospital gown flapping open in the back, she might have been at home for all the concern she showed.

The playroom — with brightly colored toys, handmade plaques featuring characters from nursery rhymes and watercolors obviously painted by very young artists — could have been in a nursery school instead of a hospital. And that's the mood Charlene Smith, R.N., clinical manager of pediatrics at Torrance Memorial Hospital Medical Center, and Beverly Breckinridge, a volunteer, had hoped to create when they furnished the room this fall.

balls, marching or dancing as ways to help him express his anxiety about being in a hospital.

Breckinridge remembers a withdrawn young boy who came to the playroom to paint. She watched while he was painting a picture of a fence, expecting him to add some black cats to the fence since it was near Halloween. Instead, he drew a large sign on the fence proclaiming, "Beware Hospitals."

The sign provided the opening she needed to encourage the boy to talk about what was disturbing him.

"We create opportunities for children to express themselves in an atmosphere of acceptance," says Breckinridge.

If a child had a bad night, Smith says, the next morning the nurse might suggest the child visit the playroom so he can work out the fear and anger he is feeling.

Other times, she says, a nurse may suggest a child spend some time there the day he has surgery scheduled.

Breckinridge recalls one child who came to the playroom before surgery who was feeling a lot of anxiety.

"We got the child to march vigorously around the room and play with balls," she says. "Then we Play is the work of children. It's the way they learn about themselves. They need that to normalize their environment. They can work through all the things they've had done to them with the dolls.

But, Smith and Breckinridge say, the room is much more than just a place where pediatric patients can play while recuperating from illness or surgery. It's also a place where they are encouraged to express their anxieties about being hospitalized through play therapy.

"Play is the work of children," says Smith. "It's the way they learn about themselves. They need that to normalize their environment."

In the playroom, she says, children can talk about IVs, shots and surgery while playing with dolls.

"They can work through all the things they've had done to them with the dolls," says Breckinridge, the play program's chairman.

"It's a great release for them to (pretend to) give shots to a doll," says Smith, adding that when a child has a chance to work out his fears, he is more cooperative about his treatment.

The playroom is staffed daily from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. by volunteers who direct the children in a variety of play and craft activities designed to help them vent their feelings. Just playing with familiar toys may be enough to make a toddler feel more secure.

For the older child, however, volunteers offer craft projects, including Play Dough and painting, or more active play like throwing sponge focused on quiet activities. When his pre-op medication arrived, he was much quieter, and he was more comfortable about what was ahead."

"He'd had a chance to work off some of the anxiety that comes from being in a strange environment," says Smith.

Although the playroom has been open for only two months, Smith and Breckinridge say that many parents have told them how much they appreciate the program.

Often the room is filled with children, some of whom are dragging IV stands along with them. Other times there may be only one or two children there.

"Even if there is only one child who benefits from something here, that's good enough for us," says Breckinridge.

Because brothers and sisters of pediatric patients always are allowed to visit with their hospitalized siblings, they often use the playroom, too.

"It provides them with an environment and the personnel to help them express their fears about a brother or sister who is hospitalized," says Smith.

When the volunteers go home at 1 p.m. that doesn't mean the playroom door is closed; it just means that craft materials are put away. The room is always open. □ costs are more than in English or social studies departments. "We need more money to function."

The "Battle of the Bands" concert format was chosen because of the area appeal. "Everyone from the kids' parents to other musicians checking out the competition and a lot of junior high and high school kids attend.

Each band brings its own following," Urena said.

The events have been so successful, Urena and a committee from Alta Loma Music Store are helping Alta Loma and Etiwanda High Schools gear up for hosting the band competition. "We may have four 'Battle of the Bands' concerts held each year locally," he said. □

 Portions of Lots 377, 383, 384 and Vacated portions of Cucamonga Avenue and Seventeenth Street, as shown on Map of Ontario, recorded in Book 11 of Maps, Page 6, Records of San Bernardino County, State of California. More generally described as an irregularly-shaped area of about 10.5 acres lying generally along a portion of the east and north boundaries of Tract No. 11631 as recorded in Book 158, Pages 53-62, Records of San Bernardino County, commencing at a point on the approximate Centerline of the vacated Cucamonga Avenue Right-of-Way and extending easterly a maximum distance of about 1341 ft. The North line of said Part "B" being the South line of the San Bernardino County Flood Control Easement recorded in Book 5818, Page 592 of Official Records of said County.
 SECTION 3: Change from "OS" (Open Space) and "SP" (Special Land Use) zones to "(RM-3.6)-S" (Multiple Family Residential - 3,600 sq. ft. min. lot area/DU Supplemental Use) zone by amendment of the Official Zoning District Map of Part IV - Zoning, Article IX, of the Upland Municipal Code the following described area:
 Portion of Lot 381 and Vacated portion of the un-named street adjacent to Lots 81 and 418, as shown on Map of Ontario, recorded in Book 11 of Maps, Page 6, and a portion of Lot 6, Block 20, Cucamonga Homestead Association, as recorded in Book

6 of Maps, Page 46 and Lot 11, Tract 11631, as recorded in Book 158, Pages 53-62, Records of the County of San Bernardino, State of California.
 More generally described as an irregularly-shaped area of about 10 acres having frontages of about 858 ft. on the East side of Tanglewood Avenue and the northerly extension thereof, and about 402 ft. on the North side of Sixteenth Street.
 SECTION 4: This ordinance shall be signed by the Mayor, attested by the City Clerk, and published in the Upland News in pursuance to the requirements of the California Government Code.
 SECTION 5: If any section, subsection, sentence, clause or phrase of this ordinance shall for any reason be invalid, such holding or holdings shall not affect the validity of the remaining portions of this ordinance. The City Council has declared that it would have passed this ordinance and each section, subsection, sentence, clause or phrase thereof,
